

Starting in 2013, Infiniti renamed its entire product line with “Q” designating the passenger car lineup, and “QX” for their crossovers and SUVs. The Infiniti QX50 (previously the EX37) is a midsize crossover based on Infiniti’s older G37 platform. It comes in base or Journey trim levels with a number of available option packages. All models come standard with a 3.7-liter V-6 engine and a 7-speed automatic transmission. Both trim levels come with rear-wheel drive or all-wheel drive.

While the QX50 offers many similar technologies, most of them are extra-cost items that add significantly to the price of the vehicle.
